Rafa Campos Qualifies for the 2019 Puerto Rico Open

Puerto Rican native and current member of the PGA TOUR Web.Com Tour Rafael “Rafa” Campos, has qualified to play in the PGA TOUR 2019 Puerto Rico Open this upcoming February at Coco Beach Golf Club in Rio Grande, Puerto Rico.

“Rafa” went wire-to-wire in the 3-day tournament conducted by the Puerto Rico Golf Association at Coco Beach’s Championship Course, site of the PR Open.

Constant windy conditions and on-and-off showers on Sunday didn’t deter Campos’, who has had success in past Puerto Rico Open’s. Entering round 1, Campos expressed his desire to “win this year”.

Friday, “Rafa” kicked things off with 7 birdies in route to a 6-under lead. Saturday, he followed it up with 6 birdies for a 5-under 67. On the final round a little fatigue set in, but still held on to the lead finishing 4-under 68.

PRGA President Sidney Wolf, said after “Rafa’s” qualifying victory, “as he starts 2019, now by earning his spot in the Puerto Rico Open, has been additionally a great opportunity to prepare his game for the start of the 2019 Web.com Tour which starts in 2 weeks. No doubt this was a huge confident booster as he has not won a golf tournament in 8 years. 2019 will be a great year for “Rafa” who looks forward to playing his 11th PR OPEN.
